

Possessions & Contentment

by Bill Crews

In the matter of material possessions have you noticed that: When we do not realize how little we have, the more inclined we are to be content; but when we realize how much we have, the less inclined we are to be content? Many married couples recall their early years together, when incomes were small, possessions were few, and the added expense of rearing small children a real budget-stretcher, as, nonetheless, happy years of joy and contentment. Please read I Timothy 6:6-10, 17-19.
